1. Getting Involved

We welcome contributions to the XLattice Project in any form, including comments, advice, patches, and contributed software.

The preferred medium of discussion is email on the project list, xlattice-devel@lists.sourceforge.net. However, if there is significant interest we can also use other means, such as IRC or forums on Sourceforge.

Anyone contributing patches or software must have an unencumbered right to the software being contributed and be willing to transfer copyright to the XLattice Project and acknowledge that the XLattice License applies to such contributed software.

The XLattice Project is currently an informal association. The intention is to formally organise it as a non-profit entity, a UK company limited by guarantee, in the fairly near future, probably in the summer of 2004.

This will not affect the license in any way; the software will remain open source under this same license.
